An international patent, also referred to as PCT patent application, is a request that your invention be patented outside of the United States. It is important to note that there is really no such thing as an “international patent.”

International Patent | UpCounsel 2020

The Patent Cooperation Treaty is an international patent law treaty, concluded in 1970. It provides a unified procedure for filing patent applications to protect inventions in each of its contracting states. A patent application filed under the PCT is called an international application, or PCT application. A single filing of a PCT application is made with a Receiving Office in one language. It then results in a search performed by an International Searching Authority, accompanied by a written o

Patent Cooperation Treaty - Wikipedia

The core element of the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT) is the 'international' patent application. If, after filing an application in the country of origin, patent applicants wish to apply for protection in other countries, it is no longer necessary to file several separate national or regional patent applications.
